

SourceMedical Acquires Medical Information Management Systems

TherapySource, the leading clinical documentation system to integrate Rehab Toolkit (RMT)

Birmingham, Ala., - February 5, 2007 – SourceMedical, a leading provider of outpatient information management solutions, today announced that it has acquired Medical Information Management Systems, LLC (MIMS).

The acquisition follows a successful pilot program designed to specifically test the combined capabilities of SourceMedical's TherapySource Software integrated with MIMS primary software, Rehab Toolkit (RMT). RMT, a therapy practice management and billing solution, proved to be an excellent match for interoperability with SourceMedical's TherapySource software, the most comprehensive clinical documentation system available to the rehabilitation market. It was mutually determined that an acquisition of MIMS by SourceMedical would facilitate the strategic objectives of both companies.

TherapySource is a clinical and administrative solution developed specifically for physical, occupational and speech therapy clinics. It enables facilities to maximize revenue by strengthening their ability to capture and manage more comprehensive, accurate clinical documentation at the point of care. Built to handle multiple sites across the enterprise, TherapySource streamlines and automates clinical and financial processes.

"We quickly recognized that the proven functionality of TherapySource and RMT combined provides the strongest, most universally competent software available today," said Todd Lutz, VP, and Chief Technology Officer for MIMS. "TherapySource has been proven time and again with large multi-clinic facilities. With the addition of Rehab Toolkit functionality, therapy facilities will be hard pressed to find any software package that can measure up to the combined capabilities." said Ralph Riccardi, president and chief operating officer of SourceMedical's Therapy and Radiology Division.
